becomes killingly funny and the pitch is maintained throughout the play. Zeliah Covington and Jules Simon-son, authors of the play, have succeeded in doing the almost impos-sible: that is, taking the old situa-tion of a scientist inventing an "elixir of youth," and then giving it not only a new twist but one of real humor. There is nothing hackneyed or trite in the play.

The cast of last night's production might have been improved on, and it is a little bit regretful that the cast was not up to the standard of the play throughout. But Zellah Covington, who is also author of the piece, takes the leading part with such faithfulness and art that some of the others may be forgiven. Mr. Covington, as "Dr. Relyea," does as fine a bit of natural acting as anyone could ask for. The women members of the cast were especially weak. might have been improved on, and it ers of the cast were especially weak. but, taking it all in all, it was a mighty good show, and theater-goers here are hoping that other bookings will be as good.

Play in Which Tenor Appears Rather Lacks Plot.

"My Cousin," shown at the Alcazar
yesterday and today, with Enrico
Caruso playing a double role, does not come up to expectations. There was practically no plot to it, and what interest was excited resulted from the fact that it was the great tenor who played the lead. The pictenor who played the lead. The pictures of life in the Italian sections were very good, but the lack of plot was evident all along, and this, added to some rather long-drawn out scenes, prevented the photoplay from being termed a first-class one.

We were in Lyons, St. Etlenne, Toulouse, Bordeaux, Cette, Marseilles, Nice and all along the Mediterraneon sea. Returning to Paris, we found they were having some trouble with about five hundred children who had been returned to their homes in Toul and Nancy, and I was sent at once to "Fatty" Arbuckle is present in a comedy, 'The Sheriff," which is something of a side-splitter. A Mexican incident, with a fair senorita, a tough toreador and some rare and racy horseback riding is quite enough to tickle anybody's ribs. The rest of the plcture, showing "Fatty" in love with the schoolteacher, is also extermely good, although the use of mechanical means produce rather crude humor at times. Arbuckle has found a co-star this time, in the person of a little, coal-black pickaning, who brings forth his share of the laughs.

"While in Nancy I am notaing two clinics a day and the 'Monsteur Doctor of America" is having big clinics. The French look upon American dadmiration and seek every opportunity to consult them. I have to assist me, two trained nurses from Chicago, two nurses' aldes, an interpreter and a young lady chauffeur to drive my car. She comes to my hotel for me at 8:45 a.m. The morning clinic runs constantly from 8 a.m. until I o'clock. Then one hour for lunch and at 2 we open another clinic in another section, which lasts until after dark. It is a great game and I am thoroughly happy in the work."

The regular election of officers of the City Federation of Parent-Teachers' Association was postponed at the meeting Wednesday afternoon until the January meeting. C. H. Winder, superintendent of the city schools, was present and made a tatik before the body. His talk was followed by a motion made by Mrs. Janet Durand that the association go on record as favoring a survey of the schools.

Mrs. Herman Ferger, president, mrs. Herman Ferger presented the school conditions in a very bad light, and charged that these conditions were retarding the growth of Chattanooga, siving as reasons for this conclusion conversations with people from the north and east, who, after looking over the schools, had decided not to bring their families here. One man's attitude was that of being forced to pay school tax and then compelled to send his children to private schools. Another man, after a survey of the schools, had wired his family not to come.

Supt. Winder said in the course of his remarks that just why the city didn't exercise its prerogative in condemning the High school, he had never been able to understand.

Before closing his remarks Supt. Winder said there was one thing he did wish, and that was that Chattanooga real estate values would not jump to New York prices whenever a high school building project is hinted at, or people would not jump to New York prices whenever a high school building project is hinted at, or people would not consider a building site smaller than one block, for the sake of future generations.

Mrs. Mary Giles Howard, president of the Chattanooga Council of Women, and Mrs. Herman Ferger agreed with T. R. Preston's prediction of a future population of 250,000 people, and argued that the first step necessary towards stimulating a healthy growth of the city is proper school facilities.

Mrs. Loof, secretary, read a letter of the city that the dread influence get and will be accusted by it.

B. Francis, Joseph S. Gianfranceschi, Guido J. Gianfranceschi, James L. Foster, J. Jacob Greengross, Edmond A. Genereux, Tenney T. Harns, James B, Harney, Ira N. Kerus, Lu-cien H. Lanier, Samuel I.
